Interviewed while Susan was participating in an international Women PeaceMaker program in San Diego at , and filmed on location (Cameroon, Africa) in the remote village of Ashong, the documentary follows her Rhythms to Peace.

The documentary tells the story of a small fire, a long-standing tribal dispute, and an exceptional woman who is overcoming gender barriers, educating youth and uniting women in development activities in order to resolve this conflict. Rhythms to Peace is the third documentary in the Women PeaceMaker Documentary Series, which is produced in collaboration with the Joan B. Kroc Institute for Peace & Justice's Women PeaceMakers Program at the University of San Diego.
